

ILLUSIONS OF ADULTING

by Sara Zimmerman

Hailey, we've been best friends forever and I love you...

...but I'm concerned about you.

You *say* you want to be more realistic about life...

...and even made
your New Year's resolution to do so.

But, in order
to change...

...you have to make a choice to stop being a victim and start accepting life for what it really is gasp!

OH NO!!

Did I hurt your feelings?

A little. But, as hard as it is to hear...

...I know you're saying it because you care.

So, thank you.

I know it feels bad to be disappointed when life isn't going your way...

...but, don't forget...

...You are NOT a victim.
You ARE strong and you DO have a choice in how you respond to life.

Plus, once you start accepting what is real and what is not, you'll feel better.

Well, I DO want to feel better, so I might as well try it.

I mean, how hard could it be to start making better choices based on seeing things for what they really are?

It's totally easy.
